CONTENTS.

I. A treatise on the influence of the moon in fevers. vii, 9–45 pp. 8°. Calcutta, G. Gordon, 1784.

II. A treatise on putrid intestinal remitting fevers, in which the laws of the febrile state and sol-lunar influence, being investigated and defined, are applied to explain the nature of the various forms, crises, and other phænomena of these fevers; and thence is deduced an improved method of curing them. xvii, 98 pp, 3 l. 8°. Edinburgh, W. Smellie, 1790.

III. A treatise on the action of sol-lunar influence, in which it is inferred, from observations on the urine, etc., that it occasions the daily and lunar revolutions observable in the state of fevers, of other diseases, and of health, by producing coincident changes in the condition of the constrictive power and balance of the vascular system; and that there is reason to believe that sol-lunar influence exerts its dominion over every production, and in every operation and revolution in nature. 2 p. l., 63 pp. 8°. Edinburgh, W. Smellie, 1791.

IV. A treatise on sol-lunar influence in fevers, etc. xiv, 133 pp. 8°. Calcutta, 1749.

V. A treatise on the barometer. This treatise first appeared in the fourth volume of the Transactions of the Asiatic Society, published in 1795. 18 pp. 8°. [n. p., n. d.]

VI. Observations respecting the remarkable effects of sol-lunar influence in the fevers of India; with the scheme of an astronomical ephemeris, for the purposes of medicine and meteorology. This treatise was read before the
